RE: Bus accident and students' instruments

Thank you for providing information regarding the bus accident this last weekend while returning home from Houston. The accident investigation continues and as insurance issues are resolved, that information will be forwarded to you. The insurance status of the driver of the car is not known yet. The charter bus company does not provide insurance coverage for this type of loss since the bus company was not at fault. The PISD insurance policy can not legally cover personally owned instruments. Most homeowner policies provide coverage for personal possessions.

As the status of the car driver's policy is made known, that information will be conveyed to you so that information can be passed along to parents.
